Nova Biomedical StatStrip ketone test strips: risk of disruption to blood ketone testing due to quality-control failures and supply interruption

Device Safety Information (DSI) Placeholder

The above Device Safety Information (DSI) has been published by MHRA and not Public Services Delivery Scotland (PSD Scotland). For this reason it cannot be uploaded to our website. However, you can view it on the MHRA website by clicking here

MHRA published the (DSI) in partnership with devolved administrations. IRIC has adopted it into the Scottish health and social care system and it should therefore be implemented by all affected health boards, local authorities and independent contractors delivering publicly funded health and social care services.

A PDF version of the alert has been distributed direct to the Incidents and Alerts Safety Officer (IASO) Network for onward local cascade. All health boards and local authorities in Scotland have a named IASO and you can find their details here.

If you are affected by the above DSI but have not received a copy, we recommend you contact your local IASO as soon as possible. This is important to ensure you are not missed from future alert distributions on the same or similar subject matter.
